Six defending or former state champions are part of this year’s field led by Lowell senior Colton Cummings who will attempt to become the 36th wrestler in state history and first from his school with at least three state crowns. He is 25-2 on the season and competing in the 126 pound class after winning the 113 title last year and the 106 crown in 2015.

One hundred twelve (112) schools will be represented at this weekend’s state finals with Brownsburg’s and Portage’s eight qualifiers and seven each from Indianapolis Cathedral and Yorktown leading the way. Chesterton and Yorktown led the state with four semi-state champions each last weekend.

Defending State Champion
Warren Central is the defending state champion after winning its second crown in school history a year ago (also 1980). The Warriors of head coach Jim Tonte, who became the first coach to lead two different schools to the state title (also Perry Meridian in 2011, 2012, 2013), have two entries this weekend including 195 pound semi-state winner and last year’s state runner-up Tristen Tonte (36-1) and semi-state runner-up at 113 pounds Skyour Turner (30-5).
